

ABSTRACT

A method of producing a probe carrier in which a probe is immobilized to a substrate is disclosed, 5 which comprises providing the substrate and contacting a basic group introduced to the substrate with the probe having an acidic group to thereby immobilize the probe to the substrate. This method enables production of a probe carrier that can reduce 10 the number of steps performed for immobilizing the probe to the substrate and easily immobilize the probe.